Wines from The Golden State’s acclaimed vines

California produces more than 80% of all wines made in the country and is the fourth largest producer of wine in the world behind the nations of France, Spain and Italy. Truly the unofficial wine capitol of the United States, harvest season is honored annually in during California Wine Month in September. To celebrate, here are some standout varietals from the region.

2016 John C. Sullenger Vineyard Cabernet Sauvignon
Nickel & Nickel Winery
Approachable yet structured and elegant, this wine delights with notes of cherry as well as delicate herbs and even a touch of earthiness. The softness is tempered well with a naturally acidic finish thanks to the bold tannins. www.nickelandnickel.com.
